About Jay Davidson

Jay has been a guiding light for The Healing Place and our community for decades. From 1991 to 2004, he took The Healing Place from a simple emergency shelter and turned it into a beacon of hope — a full continuum of care for homeless men and women, offering not just shelter, but a path to recovery and a chance to rebuild their lives.

Under Jay's leadership as President and CEO from 2004 to 2012, The Healing Place grew into a nationally recognized model of addiction recovery, helping countless individuals break free from the cycle of homelessness and addiction. His unwavering commitment to serving others has empowered thousands to find recovery, reconnect with their families, and rejoin the community as thriving, hopeful members.

As Executive Chairman since 2013, Jay continues to share this message of hope and healing, inspiring new generations to believe in second chances and the power of community.

Jay's Impact

"The work that Jay has done over the years has an amazing ripple effect that continues to grow every day. He helped create something that made a positive impact on me, then I made a positive impact on others, then those others are making a positive impact on the people in their lives." – Maurice L. , Staff & Alumni

"Jay is a visionary who leads with his heart. He is a man of integrity and a passion for life! He is an eternal optimist who gives hope to the hopeless and gives light where there is darkness. He taught me the wisdom and grace of second chances and to always lead with kindness!" – Beth D. , Friend
